ISO14001

What is ISO 14001?

ISO 14001 is an internationally accepted standard that sets out how you can go about putting in place an effective Environmental Management System (EMS). The standard is designed to address the delicate balance between maintaining profitability and reducing environmental impact; with the commitment of your entire organization, it can enable you to achieve both objectives.

Why implement ISO 14001?

Environmental issues are very topical at present with energy efficiency, environmental impact and carbon footprint being discussed throughout the construction industry. By implementing an Environmental Management System will allow you to assess the environmental impact your company is currently making, and where you can reduce that impact. By having ISO14001 certificated, will allow you to prove your companies environmental credibility with a certificate recognised internationally.

Through assessing the environmental impact of your current processes you may be able find more environmentally efficient ways to do things. This will hopefully assist you in using less water and energy which could make a considerable cost saving to your company.

What are the requirements?

To meet the requirements of ISO14001, manufacturers must

- Have an Environmental Policy
- Plan the following points
 - Environmental aspects
 - Legal requirements
 - Objectives, targets and programmes
- Implementation & Operation
 - Resources, roles, responsibilities and authorities
 - Competence, training and awareness
 - Communications
 - Documentation
 - Control of documents
 - Operational Control
 - Emergency preparedness & response
- Checking
 - Monitoring & Measurement
 - Evaluation of Compliance
 - Nonconformity, corrective action and preventive action
 - Control of records
 - Internal Audits
- Management Review

What does it involve?

Having an Environmental Management System certificated to ISO14001 involves the formation of work practises and procedures that must be implemented, maintained and reviewed. All staff in the company need to be aware of the practices and procedures and will have a role in ensuring they are maintained. The system must be certificated by a UKAS approved certification body which will include a yearly Audit.
